Spelling across the Middle and Senior Schools

Introduction

In a secondary context, discrete timetabling for spelling does not generally occur, even though spelling achievement does matter. Spelling is part of the Language strand in the Australian Curriculum for English. In other areas of study there is an expectation that students will develop the particular vocabulary of that area and use it in an appropriate way when writing.

It is therefore the responsibility of all secondary teachers to:

- a. identify the specific vocabulary of their subjects
- b. identify the spelling demands of that vocabulary
- c. explicitly teach the spelling knowledge students need in order to spell this vocabulary correctly.<sup>1</sup>

This will often involve teaching morphemic<sup>2</sup> and etymological<sup>3</sup> knowledge, e.g., the use of Greek roots in many scientific terms, the use of Italian words in music, French terms in cooking. Secondary teachers will most probably concentrate on teaching students to use strategies such as analogy, referring to a secondary resource for correct spelling, and mnemonics leading to automaticity.

While secondary teachers often place most emphasis on the spelling of new subject specific vocabulary, it is vital that they also support students in the use of increasingly complex words for everyday use.

All teachers can include a range of teaching and learning strategies when introducing the vocabulary for a learning program and when students are writing.

For example by:

- a. developing a glossary for the unit and modelling conventional spelling to the whole class
- b. positively acknowledging close approximations to the spelling of topic specific words
- c. modelling proofreading skills and providing time for students to use those skills in their own work
- d. using assessment methods that focus on what students can do and the progress they are making (e.g., as part of the criteria for a unit, the ability to spell and use the glossary words correctly in their presentation)
- e. using appropriate strategies to learn new words
- f. focusing on adding suffixes and prefixes, knowing derivatives of words, and homonyms that are frequently used in an area of study
- g. effectively using a range of resources to confirm spellings (e.g., dictionaries, computer spell checkers, atlases, word lists, etc.)
- h. using mnemonics<sup>4</sup>
- i. Weekly routines in secondary sites (10–15 minutes 3 times per week)
- j. Revise knowledge about a spelling strategy
- k. Engage students in activities to build on that knowledge
- l. Class/group discussion arising from the activity, for example, when in doubt, is it better to add Sion or tion to a word
- m. Three times per week, students continue on word study contract
- n. Provide time daily to add words to list, and to practise using a strategy to learn how to spell the words
- o. Once per week, students give each other their spelling test. This is monitored by the classroom teacher, who also provides feedback to the students.

1. PRINCIPLES

1. Standard Australian English spelling is considered important in our society. Spelling is included in both the national curriculum and national testing. The Australian Curriculum for English (ACARA, 2010) aims to ensure that students understand and use Standard Australian English in its spoken and written forms and in combination with other non-linguistic forms of communication.<sup>5</sup>
2. Across the Middle and Senior Schools there should be a common and concerted approach to the teaching of spelling across faculties.
3. All teachers should have a common understanding about teaching spelling regardless of their faculty or discipline
4. All faculties should identify the relevant vocabulary that students need to know and use in any unit of work.
5. All teachers should encourage students to maintain a record of topical words and a glossary of vocabulary for their subjects. This should include the study of the meaning and derivation of words and the strategies for learning those words.<sup>6</sup>
6. Teachers need to ensure their instruction includes the two dimensions of spelling: Expressive (production and generation) and Recognition (proofreading).

(Source: QSA, 2011)

7. The learning of spelling requires students to do much more than master individual words, however. To be independent spellers, students also need to understand why words have the spelling pattern they do and then to use this knowledge to develop strategies for learning, application and monitoring that will allow them to be independent writers and readers.
8. The teaching of spelling is a responsibility for all teachers regardless of subject specialisation
9. In the same way that all teachers should be teachers of reading and all teachers should be teachers of numeracy, so too all teachers should be teachers of spelling. Students are required to write in virtually all school subjects, and all teachers are therefore in a position to provide students with corrective feedback and guidance on spelling and other aspects of their writing.
10. Spelling is not the sole responsibility of teachers of English.

- 11 Each subject should provide students with a general word list containing the most frequently used words in the subject.<sup>7</sup>
- 12 Every student should be required to compile a personal spelling list that contains the words that he or she finds difficult.
- 13 Teachers of English at all year levels should give some attention to word study on a regular basis. The focus will usually be on morphological and etymological aspects, and extending students' general vocabulary.
- 14 As spelling is a strategic, cognitive behaviour, it is critically important that students develop a range of effective strategies<sup>8</sup>. To do this, they need strategies:
  - a. for learning spelling
  - b. remembering spelling
  - c. monitoring spelling as they write
  - d. proofreading.

2. Strategic Aim: All Middle and Senior School Students will be proficient spellers<sup>9</sup>.

1. Students should be proficient spellers by the end of Year 7.
2. As proficient spellers students should:
  - a. be able to use a variety of strategies when spelling and demonstrate proficiency in self-monitoring and self-correcting their writing.
  - b. have highly developed visual and auditory skills that allow them to say, 'that word doesn't look or sound right' as they look for patterns in words or look at word parts.
  - c. often try spelling a word several ways to see which way looks correct and can apply, from their knowledge of the English spelling system, a range of strategies to correct a word.
  - d. often utilise phonetic, visual, morphemic and rule based strategies automatically without realising that they are doing so.
  - e. recognise differences and similarities between words and establish categories of word types.
  - f. apply spelling knowledge and strategies when spelling unknown words.
  - g. use feedback they receive to either confirm or revise their hypotheses of their spelling.
3. To realise this aim all Middle and Senior School students should be:
  - a. aware of the visual and morphemic patterns of the English spelling system.
  - b. able to spell accurately a bank of complex words
  - c. use a multi-sensory approach to spelling unfamiliar words.
  - d. Able to form hypotheses about the use of suffixes and prefixes.
  - e. able to proofread and self-correct their writing.
  - f. aware that readers' needs contributes to their choice of vocabulary and spelling correctness.
4. In addition proficient spellers:
  - a. have developed a range of mnemonics<sup>10</sup> to use when writing words that might cause them some problems
  - b. use appropriate resources to check on the spelling of words, e.g., dictionaries, atlases, wall charts, magazines and spell checkers
  - c. have a large bank of words that they can spell accurately and automatically (automaticity)
  - d. apply spelling generalisations
  - e. know alternative acceptable ways of spelling words e.g., will try several ways to write a word they are unsure of
  - f. display a curiosity about words and check the environment for words

- g. think about what words mean
- h. are not always careful spellers but spell most words correctly recognise which words are “problem words” and identify the parts that cause difficulty
- i. have a personal list of words they misspell and will refer to the list when writing.

3. Teaching Spelling across the Middle and Senior School

1. Teachers can best support proficient spellers by:
  - a. fostering their interest and curiosity in words
  - b. guiding them in a process of inquiry and discovery about words
  - c. encouraging them to share the discoveries they make about words with their peers
  - d. setting open-ended problem-solving activities which draw on knowledge of the English spelling system
  - e. playing and creating word games
  - f. encouraging visualisation
  - g. teaching proofreading skills
  - h. providing time for proofreading and correcting of spelling<sup>11</sup>

2. Teachers need to know spelling patterns and conventions so that they can teach spelling actively and explicitly. They need to be able to:
  - a. introduce pupils to spelling patterns and conventions;
  - b. model how those patterns and conventions work;
  - c. encourage pupils themselves to derive patterns and conventions and to articulate those they have learned;
  - d. draw out key principles and the patterns behind the principles, if appropriate;
  - e. know and teach the exceptions.<sup>12</sup>

3. It is not enough for pupils to learn and know how to spell words out of context. They need to transfer their knowledge successfully to their independent writing. Teachers can encourage them to do this by:
  - a. expressing high expectations that pupils will apply the conventions in their own work, and reiterating those expectations when pupils do not do so;
  - b. reminding pupils about the conventions during teacher-led writing or editing;
  - c. setting specific spelling conventions as one of the criteria for written work;
  - d. marking for those conventions in the next piece of extended writing;
  - e. setting personal or group targets to help pupils to 'own' the responsibility;
  - f. giving praise for improved spelling;
  - g. encouraging pupils to use wall posters or personal prompt sheets;
  - h. Conducting frequent but brief spelling consolidation sessions and quick board activities, e.g. while waiting for the bell.<sup>13</sup>

4. Major Spelling Strategies<sup>14</sup>:

Research indicates that students develop better and quicker skills at retrieving correct spelling from their memory if they are explicitly taught the following strategies:

The State of South Source: Australia, Department of Education and Children's Services

1. Spell like it sounds

Students need to be invited to explore and experiment with spelling unknown words. Students use this strategy when they attempt to write words by breaking words into sounds they hear and saying them aloud as they write a word. They need to be reassured that taking risks with "getting it right" is an important step towards becoming a competent speller. It is important that encouragement to use invented spelling is accompanied with the explicit teaching of spelling and strategies for checking.

2. Spell it by pattern

In this strategy teachers teach the patterns for the sounds (ee as in bee, see, feet; dr as in drop, drink; tr as in tree, trap) and build word families. Teaching patterns extends well into the primary years and includes silent letter patterns, prefixes, suffixes, and compound words. Knowledge of patterns means that students can learn to spell more than one word at a time.

3. Spell it by rule/generalisation

Teachers can work with their students to develop rules generalisations as students have enough knowledge to have formed the concept before defining the generalisation. For example, forming the generalisation "when adding ing to words that end in y then leave the y and add the ing" would happen after students' writing was showing evidence of inconsistency when adding the in. Knowledge of the rule can be a useful reference in case of doubt.

4. Spell it by analogy, copying and chunking

When students use this strategy they use another known word to help them write an unknown e.g., end/bend, candle/handle, light/fright. Research (Brown, Sinatra, Wagstaff, 1996) also indicates that students taught to use analogy when learning about common rimes (ug, on, at, ent, ate, ight) results in improved spelling at all year levels. Teachers should explicitly teach students how to make use of analogy to spell a new word.

Spell it by chunking

When students chunk words they break them into smaller pieces (not necessarily syllables) so that they are easily remembered e.g., Feb-ru-ary, in-ter-net, tech-no-lo-gy, Wed-nes-day. Students can find small words inside longer words e.g., add-it-i-on, s-tip-u-late.

Spell it by copying from a secondary source

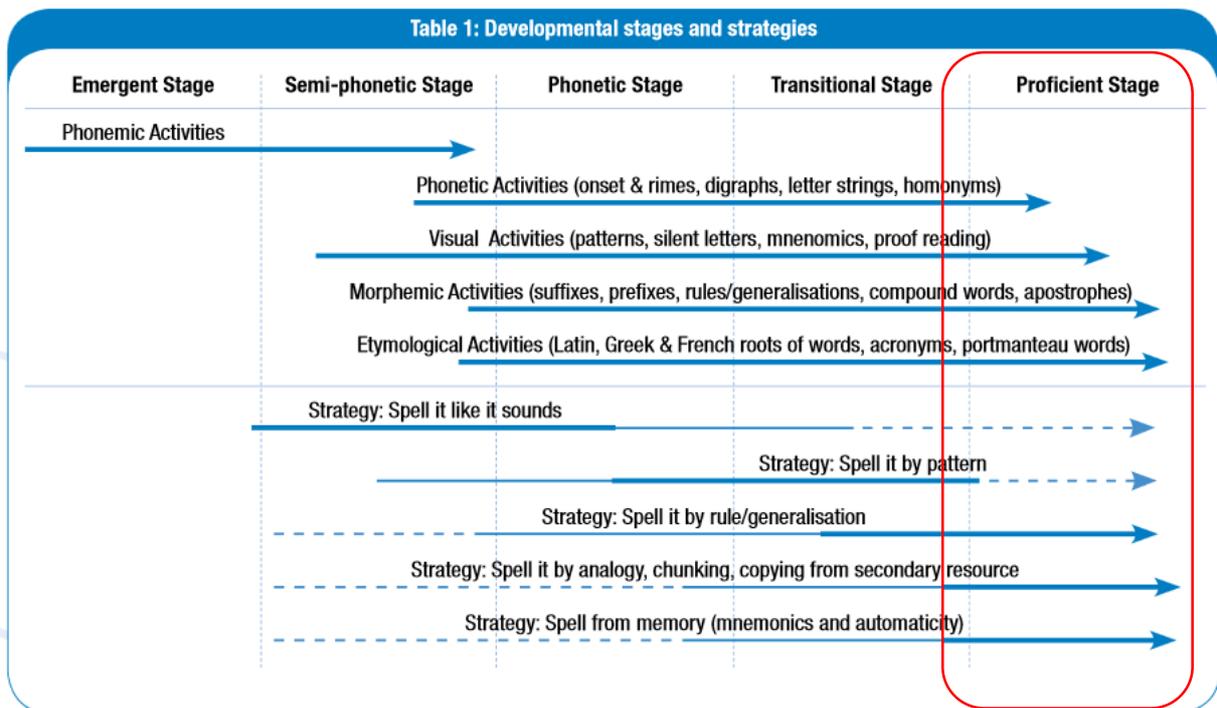

It is important that students learn how to use resources such as a dictionary, atlas, or reference book, to check the spelling of a word new to them, or a subject specific word. Before they can do this proficiently they need to know how to use a dictionary and index.

5. Spell it from knowledge, memory and mnemonics

The aim of teaching spelling is to increase the number of words that a student can retrieve from memory (automaticity). Teachers should be explicit about the purposes for learning to spell and provide opportunities for students to engage in activities that assist them to develop memorisation and demonstrate their growing proficiency.

Mnemonics is a device that is used to help students to remember the spelling of words. Teachers can provide their students with some mnemonics e.g.:

- ocean: use the first letter of each word – only cat's eyes are narrow
- separate: There was farmer named Sep and one day his wife saw a rat. She yelled SEP a rat-E
- hear/here: You HEAR with your EAR.
- affect/effect: The Greenhouse Effect (noun) affects (verb) us all

Activities to support students to use morphemic knowledge, prefixes and suffixes:

Proficient spellers

Word association

Strategies: Spell it by pattern, analogy, chunking, and mnemonics

Start with a word morpheme and build an ever-growing set of branches where the new word is related to the previous word,

Linking a non-word-based morpheme to syllables, e.g.,

Proficient spellers

Strategies: Spell it by pattern, spell it by generalisation, chunking, analogy, from memory

Learning the meanings of the terms, as well as revising past, present and future tenses, verbs and adverbs will help proficient spellers, as they continue learning about the use of suffixes and prefixes.

Teachers introduce students to those suffixes and prefixes that are relevant for specific areas of study, e.g., ism, ution, ition, ation, logy, ology, ist, ic, ical, eous, ate.

Teachers provide a range of activities that could include literature and dictionary searches, and word puzzles to support students to spell suffixes and base words correctly.

A word about the spelling lists

The words that appear in this list are British English, with American English appearing in red (for those using an American syllabus). Whilst you are not expected to know the definition of each and every word it would certainly help if you learnt as many as possible. If you don't possess a decent dictionary then now is the time to buy one. I believe the best dictionary on the market is Collins Cobuild Learner's Dictionary, Concise Edition ISBN 0-00-712640-9. It is an indispensable reference book for all students from intermediate level upwards.

The Cobuild provides additional information about word frequency and grammar, and it is from this information that I have based three of the four spelling lists. Whenever you look up a word you can see immediately if it is a very common word or not. About half the entries in the dictionary have a frequency marker. They work on a scale from five black diamonds down to no diamonds at all (these are words which you are more likely to read or hear than use regularly).

Words with five black diamonds are the most frequently used words and form a huge proportion of the language – the 'grammar' words, such as of, the, as, with, also and so on, as well as frequently used vocabulary words such as carry, sit, and think etc. There are just over 600 entries (head words) in this band, representing over 1,500 different forms. The Year 6 spelling list is based on the five black diamond words. In addition to these an extra 300 words have also been added to the Year 6 list. The majority of these additional words are classified as common words (three diamonds) and would normally appear in the Years' 9 -10 list, however I feel they are more appropriate for the Year 6 list and have therefore included them. Words such as birthday, cat, clock, milk, pet, sick, swim, tap, truck, wet and so on.

Words with four black diamonds (just over 1,000) are classified as very common words. These account for a total of nearly 2,500 forms, and together with the five-diamond words account for 75% of all English usage. Together these two bands represent the essential core of English. The Years' 7-8 spelling list has been based on the four black diamond words.

Words with three, two, and with one black diamond are progressively less frequent. The Years' 9 -10 spelling list is based predominately on the three diamond words. The words for Years 11-12 were individually chosen from the three, two and one diamond words and selected on their relevance to essay writing; this list was compiled by me. Whilst the Cobuild Dictionary has been used as a guide throughout, I take full and absolute responsibility for the final spelling lists which appear on www.pocketbasics.com - Lyn Magree, 8 February 2004.

Spelling

There are various guides and rules used for spelling. However, I find in many cases it simply comes down to practise, practise and more practise. When learning to spell a new word keep in mind that it is much easier to spell a word you've seen and heard before. So before you launch into learning the definition of a new word first try to become familiar with it by saying it over and over again.

Example

say it: supercilious, supercilious, supercilious, supercilious, supercilious, supercilious, supercilious spell it: Super ·cili ·ous, super ·cili ·ous learn it: Behaving or looking as though one is superior to others e.g. - a supercilious shop assista
